1. Some suspected bias incidents might not clearly fit the above definition. In these cases, a common-sense approach to the incident must be used. If an incident appears to be bias based, it should be investigated as such. Verification of intent can be made during the ensuing investigation.
 2. Officers must recognize that a single bias incident may initially appear as less serious when viewed in the larger context of all crime. Nonetheless, any suspected or confirmed bias incident is serious by its very nature. What may appear to be a minor incident can easily escalate into a larger problem or public safety concern
- B. All agency personnel shall take a proactive role in promoting peace and harmony among the diverse groups living and working within this jurisdiction and to protect all persons from bias related incidents.

- F. Actions taken by officers when responding to bias incidents are visible signs of concern and commitment to the citizens of the community.
- G. While a single bias incident may initially not appear serious when viewed in the larger context of all crime, it is serious by its very nature. What may seem to be a minor occurrence can easily escalate into a larger order maintenance problem of public safety concern.
- H. Bias incidents may generate fear and concern among members of a community. These incidents have the potential of recurring, escalating and possibly causing counter-violence. Therefore, these incidents require a thorough and comprehensive response.

Suspicious activity with a nexus to terrorism must be reported immediately, per existing county protocols. Activity can also be
